Harry Potter Places Book Five Cape Wrath (Part of Site #68) Supplementum

🙄 Not a Harry Potter Film Site—Not Mentioned in any of the Books

The Internet Movie Data Base listed Cape Wrath, Sutherland, Scotland, UK as a Half-Blood Prince filming location only because of a Confundus Charm. But, for Potterites divinely inspired to visit every Potter Place on the planet—even sites that aren't really Potter Places—we've created this Supplementum.

Cape Wrath

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Cape\_Wrath

<http://www.capewrath.org.uk/>

Google Maps UK Coordinates: Cape Wrath, Scotland

or 58.625453,-4.998779

Parseltongue Pointer:

- Wrath = "RATH" (not "ROTH," which is the UK pronunciation of the English word "wrath")

Cape Wrath is the Northernmost Promontory of the Scottish West Highlands

While many assume it was named for the wrathful (angry and violent) way that the sea thrashes Scotland's north coast, the name is actually based on the pronunciation of an Old Norse term that means "turning point." Why? Because Cape Wrath is the point where the Vikings commonly turned their ships for home after raiding the Scottish coast during the late-8th to mid-11th centuries.

Built atop the Cape Wrath promontory in 1828, the Cape Wrath Lighthouse was continuously manned until converted to an automatic operation in 1998.

Although not keepers of the lighthouse, John and Kay Ure are the promontory's sole inhabitants. After leasing the old lighthouse keeper's cottage in 1999, John and Kay spent several years converting the building into a three-bedroom home—with an attached café!

The Ozone Café opened on June 1st, 2009, and has never closed. No matter what time of the day or night, someone showing up at Cape Wrath will find a friendly face, a snack and a hot cuppa. Unfortunately, "at the moment, there are no public conveniences at The Ozone Café"—a public toilet is not available here!

[We suspect that if you really have to go, John or Kay would let you use their personal loo. But, please don't tell them we said so!]

Cape Wrath is only accessible between May and September

The wild winter conditions experienced on the northern coast of Scotland make travel to the cape impossible. Even during summer months, rough weather can unexpectedly blow in and prevent access.

The Clo Mor Cliffs

Google Maps UK: Kearvaig Bay, Lairg, Highland IV27

At 281 meters (920 feet) above sea level, the Clo Mor Cliffs are the highest found anywhere on the UK mainland. Although they look similar to the Cliffs of Moher (an Irish HbP film site seen in the screenshot below), they are not the cliffs seen on screen when Harry and Dumbledore traveled to the Locket Horcrux Cave.

[Half-Blood Prince screenshot (enhanced)]

Snapping Potterlike pix of Scotland's Clo Mor cliffs is possible only if you undertake a four-hour roundtrip hike between the Cape Wrath Lighthouse and Kearvaig Bay.

Going to Cape Wrath

 See the Cape Wrath website for information related to reaching Durness—the nearest village—via public transport.

<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Durness>

Once in Durness, you'll need to find a bus to the Cape Wrath Ferry.

<http://capewrathferry.co.uk/>

From what we've been able to discover, there's a bus stop near the Balnakeil Craft Village, where you can catch a bus to the car park nearest the Keodale Ferry Landing.

<http://www.scotlandguides.org/tour/balnakeil-craft-village-1679.htm>

Happily, if you use Transport Direct to plot your public transport journey, type "Durness Keoldale Ferry Landing" into the destination box to obtain an itinerary that will take you directly to the Kyle of Durness ferry pier.

Driving to Cape Wrath

You cannot drive to the Cape Wrath Lighthouse.

No public roads go there—from anywhere! Visitors must catch a small passenger ferry to cross the Kyle of Durness (see the link above), then board a mini-bus for the 40 minute trip to the lighthouse.

The car park (and bus stop) closest to the Keoldale (Kyle of Durness) Ferry Landing is one-tenth of a mile from the pier—a 2 minute walk.
